Boulanger has made an inglorious flight from France, and in that dramatic manner that is exemplified in low comedy. As a consequence all France is laughing at him, and the man Tener declares came in with a horse and song goes out in a laugh and with what has been well termed an opera bouffe flight. It is to be hoped that, under the circumstances, the Government will not issue against this overrated man the decree of banishment. Such decrees are foreign to true republics and should have no place in the schedule of penalties they recognize. Boulanger should not be made a martyr. We would not deny him any hatred of the external enemies of his country, love for the people of France, and the possession of all good soldierly qualities. But what then? What does rector of the Government Geological Surall that is opposed to a republican form of State Board of Trade on Tuesday: government; for all that would plunge the nation into war with her old-time enemy on the slightest provocation. As an orator he is nothing, as a writer he excites the ridicule of scholars, as a politician he has not ordinary skill, and at no time has he been able to control his own following, but has uniformly been its subject. The declaration on which he hinges all his claims is "a Republic without parliamentarism," which is the equivalent of saying a Union without a Federal Congress. Behind Boulanger is an association devoted to his interests that calls itself "The League of Patriots." It is possible that the Government is in possession of information that may attach to the organization purposes inimical to the perpetuity of the Republic, but we have the assurance of not a few men whose patriotism and devotion to the Republic have been tried that the organization is legitimate in its aims. It is, however, never safe to place reliance upon secret political associations; as a rule they are opposed to the best in- Waterman, who is still at San Diego: terests of a Republic, and the cause that resorts to them is open to suspicion, except perhaps, in times of national trial under war, when the patriotic element feels the need of concealing the means it employs in behalf of national integrity. The objection to the cause of General Boulanger is that it is causeless; that France needs at this time no radical reforms. It is that character of movement that enlists the sympathies of the declared enemies of free government; it is the kind of agitation that is more than likely to sweep its leaders into the whirlpool of a revolution to re-establish a molecular to the sympaths of the constitutional Government of the foundation of the constitutional Government of the Constitutional Government of the State, and the inauguration of President Washing on, a legal holiday; and request that each citizen within the confines of this State refain from pursuing his usual vocation and so observe the day that whirlpool of a revolution to re-establish : monarchy and make its figure-head a dictator. While General Boulanger may not contemplate it, nevertheless the move ments of his party bear a strong resemblance to the activities that preceded the coup d'etal of the late Emperor of the French; and the Republican press of France, having taken alarm in conse quence, is now daily and loudly sounding the note of warning. While General Boulanger, therefore, may be entirely sincere in his declaration, that his aim is simply to so reconstruct the organic law as to excludge "Parliamentarism," should he and his supporters succeed in that direction, it is certain that he cannot control that which he puts in motion, and will be driven to pose either as a broken idol or a dictator. In fact, he is already upon the verge of being bulletined as the former. In the latter case his ascendancy would be but temporary, for he has neither the political wisdom of Louis Napoleon nor a tenth part of his ability to handle men or direct the course of a people like the French, who, once aroused against the Government, do not stop short

The reader who is interested in the ab sorbing report of the march of Henry M. Stanley to the relief of Emin Pasha, will be aided in the reading of the report to pedition by taking in hand a good atlas. H He should locate Stanley's point of departure about sixty miles up the Aruwimi river, which is an affluent of the Congo and enters the latter about fifteen milesin a direct line-below the intersection of the first degree of north latitude with the twenty-fourth degree of longitude east from Greenwich. This point of departure was at Yambuya, on the lower Aruwimi, where Stanley fortified a post, and left his reserve or rear guard. Very few maps will show the river or the station; the former is often designated as the Biyere, and which Stanley says changes its name as the provinces of differing tribes are entered. But the reader can very accurately locate this starting point of the great explorer by fixing upon a spot on the map where a line of longitude twenty-four It is perfectly splendid to build up nervous, degrees fifty-one minutes east from Greenwich intersects a line of latitude one de- Loy, of 327 Ellis street, Mrs. G. Major J. W. Powell, Office Geological Survey, Washington, D. C.—Dear Sir: I understand there has been an appropriation made for storing water in the more arid regions of the United States, and that the matter was left with you, and I write this to call your attention to the mountains that look down on the San Joaquin valley, where, I am told by parties here, sufficient water can be stored to irrigate those portions of the valley which at present are of very little or no value for the lack of water. I would like it very much if, before expending all the money, you would look over this region.

I suppose this appropriation is not so much for doing physical work necessary for making reservoirs as it is to examine and ascertain where would be the best location for such reservoirs.

Defending Their Pine Nuts. Carson, April 4th .- John Elks, the Ir dian killed last week by Mudge, had a long conversation with Oliver Roberts, of this city, about a mouth before his death, which will probably threw some light on the frequent murders in the pinenut coun-try. Elks said that for some years the white men had cut timber on the pinenut range, and that none of the men who cut timber had any title to the land, as it belonged to the Indians for centuries. The pinenuts are harvested in the fall and und into flour, which is a staple article oi food during the winter. Elk complained bitterly of the depredations of timber-cutters, and said they were thinning out the forests so fast that the Indians feared a total failure of the pinenut crop would re-sult. CHICAGO, April 3d .- The Times' Wash gton special says : The California delegation called on the President to day, and asked him if he could not see his way clear to appoint Mr. Osborne, of Los Angeles, to be Government Printer. Without actually saying so, the President gave them to understand that none of the candidates now seeking the place is entirely satisfactory to him. He wants a big man, one of perior executive ability and unimpeachable integrity; a man who has had sufficient experience to successfully handle 2,500 employes and the greatest printing establishment in the world. It seemed as if an entirely by the way, is the source of the city's donew nine represented the Capital City at the Haight-street grounds in San Francisco yesterday, so strong was the playing of the team in contrast with its work of last Sunday. The members appeared to be infused with new life and confidence. Hapeman and McLaughlin gave a splendid exhibition of bali-playing, without an error, and the fielding and willow-work was a surprise. The Sacramentos took the lead in the third inning, which they increased as the game progressed, and won without taking their turn at the bat in the last half of the ninth bout. The day was cold and raw, still the game was witnessed by eight hundred per-

McLaughlin gave the pitcher splendid support behind the bat, and caught several difficult flies. His throwing was also good. He allowed only one pitched ball to pass through his hands.

The work of the infield showed unremitting practice. Veach carried off the honors in the outfield, catching five flyers in good style. The playing of the Sacramentos won much well-deserved applanse.

The fielding of the Oaklanders saved their pitcher from having several hits scored against him. Up to the seventh in-ning the Oaklands played without an error, but after that became rattled and acted wild. During the fourth inning Sheridan objected to recognizing O'Neill's orders to the Oaklands. O'Neill claimed to be the Assistant Captain.

The chief features of the game were Veach's fielding and batting, and McLaughlin's catching. Following is the summary of the Sacramento club had signed Borchers to pitch, the Stockton Independent of yesterday says:

The assertion that Borchers will pitch in the game on Sunday against the Stocktons is not likely to be fulfilled, as Borchers has been blacklisted and cannot be reinstated without formal action by the League Directors. President Campbell of the Stockton club will not consent to his reinstatement, and until he does consent to his reinstatement, and until he does Borchers will not play in any league game. An attempt was made to have the name of Knell taken from the blacklist, but Robinson would not consent, and there seems no reason why Borchers should be treated any better.

Sacramento has a good pitcher in Hapeman, a harder man to hit, by the way, than Borchers, who has on more than one occasion been hit hard and often by the Stockton team. A good catcher and at least one good fielder would be of more use to them than Borchers. There is a good catcher now in Stockton, who could be of more use to them than borders. There is a good catcher now in Stockton, who could be signed, and Hughey Smith would not allow balls to drop in his territory as they did or Sunday, had he been playing centerfield instead of Veach. To a man up a tree it looks from the accounts of the games as though many of th so-called base-hits should have been recorde is errors on the part of the fielders.

Thanks, awfully, but you see the Sacra mentos are pretty well pleased with their catcher. What's the matter with McLaugh-

THOSE GRAPES ARE VERY SOUR. The baseball scribe of the San Francisco Bulletin says the report of Borchers' engagement by Sacramento causes astonishment down there, and re-echoes the refrain that comes from Stockton. Referring to other subjects of gossip in ball circles, the

At present he is considering an ofter made him by a semi-professional club in the lower San Joaquin valley. Henry Moore, the well-known fielder of the Stockton club, Tuesday evening took unto himself a partner for life. The lady's name was Miss Maggie Agnew. The ceremony took place in St. Mary's Cathedral.

Sacramento has concluded that she cannot win the champlopship with her present team.

Sacramento has concluded that she cannot win the championship with her present team, and again the wires are burdened with telegrams from Manager Gillis to parties in the East, looking to the engagement of new players. Breckenridge, the much-vaunted pitcher who was imported from the East by the Sacramento Club, proves to be another man who can no longer play ball. His arm is completely dead, and it is not expected that he will be placed in the box at all. Meanwhile Hapeman, the California twirler, will have to do ail the work for the club. The agents of the Sacramento Club in the East, to all appearances, do not know a ballplayer when they see one, or else they are trying to break up the California League by sending out here a lot of men whom they know have not been able to play ball for years.

It is needless to remark, perhaps, that the Senator George Heart's palace horse-car "San Simeon" departed for the East last evening, carrying a dozen noted runners. Five of them—Robinhood (3 years), N. Y. M. A three-year-old Joe Hooker colt, the property of Dr. Hamlin of Marysville, was also among the number. Yesterday morning officers Arlington, Rider and Franks made a raid on a number of empty box-cars on the north levee, between Ninth and Tenth streets, and succeeded in capturing four opium fiends. The Woodthorpe Company, at the Opera House last evening, to a good audience, presented "The Little Detective." Miss Woodthorpe did the best work of her engagement in the several disguises she took n the play, the completest being that of the nurse. To-night the play will be "Among the Pines." Miss Woodthorpe will assume the character of "Butterfly."

Monday and Tuesday nights next, at the Metropolitan, the well-known tragic actress, Madame Janauschek, will appear, as Meg Merrillies on the first night, and Lady Macbeth the next evening. She has repeatedly played here, and always with success. She has in her support one of the best leading men of the stage, George Chaplin. Her choice of the two characters named presents her at her best, and they befit her age excellently. Recent critical press com-ments at the East speak of Janauschek as still a mistress of the tragic drama.

One does not like to believe that that ideal little aristocrat existed but in the clever brain of Frances Hodgson Burnett. One need not. There are countless little Lord Fauntleroys at countless hearths. And countless American cousins of the original "Lord" swing their sashes round their lithe bodies with as much of quaint grace as did the Earl's grandson. Of course a Fauntleroy Suit doesn't make a Fauntleroy. But it is a beginning, and many a seven-year-old will prove more a Fauntleroy in such attire. Who could be a Fauntleroy in a stuffy, queerly-cut suit as unyielding as a board? Small wonder that some unfortunate seven-year-old man finds it hard to be a gentleman in the homely garments that have fallen to his lot!

Mrs. Burnett did something more than write a charming book, typifying a charming boy.

She began a new era in dress for miniature men-an era of warm colors and soft, clinging materials. They are here, of course; the boys shall not find us wanting. Real Lord Fauntleroy Suits.
